Beb Gardner's Chances Considered Best of American Players in British Amateur Golf Championship Which Opens To-Day.

right, 1500, by The Frem Publishing Co. RH American golfers going to make a clean-up this month in the tourneys for the amateur and open golf titles of Great Britain? Judging by the course record breaking play of Walter Hagen and the reports of the practice of all our stars, both amateur and professional, that are entered in the classics abroad. the U. S. A. should make a great showing this time. There are 165 tries in the British amateur chamwhip which opens to-day on the course at Muirfield, Cullane, Scotland. Robert A. Gardner, former national amateur champion of this country, and Nelson Whitney have hown up well in practice. Gardner is the big hope of the invading confingent, but even at that the American players express no great hopes of sctory, as, everything else being qual, the home talent's knowledge of the course will give them the edge. Gardner will not play to-day as he drew a bye in the first round, but to-
